Supplier Spotlight Parker Clay

Empowering Women, Transforming Communities

At Parker Clay, we do more than craft world-class leather goods, we create opportunity. By hiring at-risk women in Ethiopia, paying living wages, and providing skills training, career development, and financial literacy, we help women break cycles of dependency and build better futures for themselves and their communities. Our partnership with Ellilta Women at Risk (EWAR) goes beyond charity. Together, we restore independence to women who have been exploited through prostitution, with more than 1,000 graduates and over 90% remaining free from exploitation. By connecting these women to meaningful work at our factory, we create lasting economic empowerment through trade.

We also start at the source, working with local, sustainable ranchers who receive fair pay for ethically raised leather. When women are empowered, families and communities thrive. Every Parker Clay purchase supports these women, uplifts their communities, and champions a model of change built on dignity, opportunity, and sustainable impact.

Supplier Spotlight

RIGWA

Fresh Thinking. Better Living.

At RIGWA, we create elevated food storage for real life, combining modern designs with insulated, leakproof performance to keep food fresh longer, anywhere. All of our products are 100% non-toxic, built to last, and designed with the belief that great food storage should be better together and built for life.

Family operated and customer driven, RIGWA was born from the chaos of five kids and a schedule that no container could keep up with. Tired of cracked plastic, shattered glass, and leaky ceramic, we created non-toxic, leakproof containers made from double-wall stainless steel like your favorite water bottle. Perfect for school lunches, backyard dining, or mountain picnics, RIGWA keeps your food fresh longer, hot or cold, at home or on the go. No spills, no stress, just food fresh longer, anywhere.
